

The Asper Fellowship in Media
Faculty of Information and Media Studies
Western University, London, Ontario, Canada

The Faculty of Information and Media Studies (FIMS) at Western University invites applications for the Asper Fellowship in Media. The role of the Fellow is to promote public discussion of a range of issues related to the nature of Canadian media. In reckoning with ongoing activism and policy responses to racism and inclusion, our current Asper Fellowship emphasizes the intersection of media and racialized groups in Canada and abroad, including Black communities, Indigenous communities, communities of colour and new immigrant communities of colour. We seek applications from scholars and journalists who study or produce media for and about racialized groups in mainstream or independent contexts.

The Fellow is in residence for one term: for the coming year, January-April 2023. The successful applicant will receive compensation of $28,000, and up to $10,000 to support project activities during the tenure of the fellowship. The amount available for project support will depend upon the project's proposed scope and an approved budget, to be determined in consultation with the Dean. Travel and housing support are also available. Asper Fellowship teaching takes place in person, pending COVID19 health and safety requirements.

During the term of the Fellowship, the Asper Fellow will teach a course in an area of expertise in one of the Faculty's programs, will deliver a public lecture to the Faculty and University community, and will be engaged in a significant media-related project that will lead to public dissemination. Currently, we seek projects that address the life and history of racialized groups, and/or the burdens of racism and exclusion, through a Canadian media lens.

We anticipate that this position will appeal to journalism/media practitioners or to journalism/media scholars who would value an opportunity to engage in focused teaching and scholarly reflection. We also anticipate that the successful applicant will be a distinguished leader in the area of journalism/media studies who will use the Asper Fellowship opportunity to enrich teaching and scholarship or media making at Western.

The Faculty of Information and Media Studies is a vibrant, interdisciplinary Faculty. It currently offers an undergraduate program in Media, Information and Technoculture (MIT) and a related stream Media and the Public Interest (MPI) with an enrolment of approximately 1,000 students, and graduate programs in Journalism and Communication, Media Studies, Library and Information Science, and Health Information Science.
